Ages: preadolescent to geriatric
Testing Time: 30 minutes

Use the RBCA-2 to reveal severity and quality of acquired reading problems in people (preadolescent to geriatric) who have bad brain injury. This systematic evaluation is individually administered in 30 minutes and lets you measure the nature and degree of reading impairments, measure reading comprehension, and guide the direction and focus of therapy.

You’ll find the RCBA-2 appropriate for the use of preadolescent through geriatric clients-anyone with an acquired reading disability who previously had attained reading literacy. This test is first acquired dyslexia reading test developed specifically for acquired reading problems that accompany or a part of aphasia.
In addition, the RCBA-2 is designed to help you target treatment more effectively. You can administer and score the test quickly and easily. You’ll enjoy the utility of the new easel back stimulus books, and the updated art will hold patients’ interest.

The supplement material in this second edition consists of seven additional subtests that measure the different varieties of acquired dyslexia. Whereas the original RCBA measures silent reading comprehension. Use the subtests at your discretion-give the patient all seven or just one, according to need and available time.
